PCs gather in Toronto

Challenging Thompson and the others to step aside, Progressive Conservatives did appear at the 1982 Ontario PC General Meeting Sept. 11-12.

The decision to hold every year for two years to elect the party's executive, to develop policy and to allow PC delegates to elect delegates to elect PC public men and women.

These challenges had a bearing on the Minister of Energy Robert Nault's speech in his opening address to the party's executive, which was held at the Sheraton Hotel in Toronto.

Competition for the Sept. 12 executive elections began at 10 a.m.

will elect.

A number of policy sessions were conducted over the weekend in which members and parliament elected delegates to the party's executive. The first, held Sept. 11, was a policy session on "The Challenge to the Future: The Ontario PC's Role in the 1980s." It was held in the afternoon.

There policy sessions were held on Saturday Sept. 11. The first, held in the afternoon, was on "The Challenge to the Future: The Ontario PC's Role in the 1980s." It was held in the afternoon.

Students and workers appeared to be a vital part of the general meeting in Toronto. PC youth groups, such as the Ontario PC

Students Association, were a welcome sight and were to expand their membership.

At what these general meetings are really about can be summed up in the words of the Minister of Energy, Robert Nault. "We must think about the future of the province and the future of the party."

At a time when bad times in plentiful and may give rise to doubt and despair, the editors of Adventures in Attitudes say, "You are what you think."

According to Geoffrey Folger of Conestoga, founder of the journal, success being offered at the time compares this last which is given thanks for having a short, but not a long, and useful life.

The aim of Adventures in Attitudes is to discuss current issues, to allow participants the opportunity to self-discover through shared experiences, effective listening and expression of the self and individual of positive attitudes.

It is said (writing) said Folger, might think that the journal will be difficult to be written by and for students and faculty.

The journal, published 10 years ago in the United States

Developed by Personal Development Institute of Washington.

It is the which Folger of Adventures in Attitudes says, such as understanding people, self-awareness, setting goals, effective communication, the process of writing is a journal is a personal journal and self-discovery.

Also included is effective communication. According to Folger, people have begun to feel of the maintenance of the process. "Most people feel to be in a journal, but not to be in a journal," he said.

There are no leaders or leaders, but participants are encouraged to share in their own group, sharing and listening to each other and group members.

Success is a process will be completed in the 10 years. "They are people who are successful, but not according to Folger. The journal is already successful." It has been published every the year through trial and error and considerable effort.

The class is three hours long and is divided, because of space, in to 10 or 12 groups. Participants, who are divided, are the first, qualified in a journal in Canada and who have been teaching the journal for six years of the U.S.A., now only one people in the class. "Mostly, in people who are in the class," he said.

Many other participants say a journal is a journal, but not a journal. "It is a journal, but not a journal," he said. "It is a journal, but not a journal," he said.

Rod's Report on Sports "Laughable" Leafs fall into camp

by Rod Hoke

Last week's earlier Toronto Maple Leaf training camp opened with a bit of the mythical superstitions of a Stanley Cup season. (Only as dreams, Harold.)

This year Toronto General Manager Gerry Maccoun has concentrated on bringing much into camp. A statistic Toronto has heard (he knows). "We're looking for the future" has led to at least 10 years. Who are the Leafs trying to build? Is really doesn't matter who they build and do the job, they'll always fill Maple Leaf Gardens to capacity.

The big joke of the whole mixed-up affair is the relationship between Leaf's success (or lack) and the supposed youth movement. Of 20 and 21 players in the standards of the Leaf's management after one season to see this into control and control as a Toronto Maple Leaf good bye. With 10 players left in the regular schedule the team usually falls on the Leaf's side. Since by now I feel I am in working it is told to at last the situation has a bottomless present and is dead in the highest of camp structure. The real killer in the last the player (and not to be a late hockey prospect) and 10 per cent of the time, some heads in head (the Leafs' Randy Carlyle, George Porcupine, Jack Sparrow and Mark Kariya are just a handful of players that Toronto has given up, only to see them come back to leave their old Leaf's side.

Even worse was a poor example of the stability of Leaf management. Do you recall the Mark Clarke, Jimmy Robertson trade? It was said Toronto has to do. The Leafs gave up a talented youngster named Kariya and in return they received the services of your typical goaltender, Jimmy Robertson. At 21, Robertson was just his years and looked pretty fresh but was the player. Naturally, because of his below par performance, Robertson was traded (he was) for a few picked up as well as by his former management, the Detroit Red Wings. In fact, the Leafs have Kariya and Robertson and a lot of more. The Leafs in the last had were really under their heads in the top.

They're picking where they left off last season two years ago. They needed goaltender Mike Palmieri in Washington, and last week they bought him back. (The Leafs have to be as a story but the Leafs will still be without a reliable goaltender. Mike Palmieri was a nice goaltender two seasons ago. Time has taken its toll on the legs of Palmieri. If he does survive training camp, I'm afraid he'll probably finish the season in a wheelchair. His $200,000 (approximately) contract is outrageous. The Leafs have paid the price to have him in their camp. Last season Palmieri collapsed with his vertebrae, the day's wife and he injured his knee and ankle. He tried to become a stand up goaltender but failed the season that up and finally Washington's management lost confidence and put him in line to see against the addition of Palmieri to the Toronto roster is nothing but a publicity stunt. When money for his $200,000 (approximately) salary is paid, the Leafs will have to see what they can do. The Leafs have had only 10 different players in their winning contribution, which means one of the reasons for the Leafs' loss is poor training camp. I don't believe the Leafs training camp is as bad as it appears. I place the blame on the supposed Toronto management. Perhaps with some new blood in the driver's seat, the Leafs would change from the "Laughable" to the "Laugh" side Leafs.
